Lesson 1

Making friends

Preparation

There are no hard and fast rules for making friends because human personalities vary. Here are two rules of thumb that one can make friends easily: 1. Remember names: Always remember a person's name when you address him though he may be just a nodding acquaintance. It never fails to impress people that you know their names though they don't know yours. In fact, it shows them you care enough to notice their special existence, which makes them feel special. You will have endeared yourself to them and gained a friend in the process.

2. Be a good listener: The reason people sometimes don't want to listen to your problems is that they also have tons of problems of their own. Always have a ready ear. People don't really need your opinion; they just need a confirmation of their decisions. Affirm people and dispel their fears, but never criticize bluntly. You will be surprised that though you haven't said a word, you will be regarded as a good conversationalist.
